

CONSERVATION BIOLOGY

English Language Training Course

{ Learn English from native speaker ecologists in Hungary }

The Barn Owl Foundation (BOF) of Hungary is offering a unique opportunity to students and graduates of biological conservation subjects! We are inviting those who wish to improve their conservation career prospects to join our English language residential course/camp specialising in Industry-Specific English language skills.

The course will run at the BOF headquarters, Orosztony, Zala County, over a period of 7 days. The course will be given by BOF personnel including a native and qualified British English teacher with a well-established specialization in teaching English skills to Hungarians in the conservation sector.

The course will be delivered through a full and diverse programme of activities. These will range from classroom-based presentations and exercises to applied fieldwork/group tasks where students can practice and develop their language skills in a real work environment.

So why not join us for a valuable, rewarding and enjoyable week where you'll have the chance to meet others and take a step forward in your wild career?

Attendees will gain:

- A valuable international perspective on the culture and language of nature conservation
- A broad spectrum of technical English vocabulary related to natural history, ecology, and conservation
- Crucial written skills required for successfully gaining employment in an English-speaking market
- Valuable experience working with an NGO and confidence in communicating in an English-speaking environment

22-29 August 2015

BOOK A PLACE
BEFORE 15 JUNE 2015!

Early Bird Price: 38 000 HUF

Price after 15 June 2015: 44 000 HUF

*Price includes 7 nights in a fully-equipped countryside cottage, 3x meals, tuition, digital learning materials