(ASEEES)
Lviv City Council

About MAG

The International Association for the Humanities (MAG) was founded in 2007 by advisers of the Humanities Program in Belarus, Russia, and Ukraine, which was organized by the American Council of Learned Societies with support from the Carnegie Corporation of New York. As a network of networks in Eastern Europe and Eurasia, MAG serves similar functions to those that ASEES (Association for Slavic, East European, and Eurasian Studies) does in North America. Both associations are international, interdisciplinary meeting places for scholars. In its brief history, MAG has conducted competitions for research and for travel grants, and has published the Internet magazine, TheBridge-MOCT (thebridge-moct.org).

About UCU

The Ukrainian Catholic University is an open academic community and a private institution for education and research, living the Eastern Christian tradition and forming leaders to serve with professional excellence in Ukraine and internationally. The University's priorities are: a well-grounded humanities education, socially-aware orientation of the instructional process, and the spiritual dimension of education.

CONVENTION SPONSORS

The International Association for the Humanities (MAG) thanks all of the convention sponsors whose generous contribution and support help to promote the continued growth and visibility of our Association during our convention.

June 27, Wed (Day 1)

17:15-18:30

(location: Dining Hall 'Trapezna')

Opening Ceremony and Keynote Address

MAG has historically focused on Belarus, Russia, and Ukraine. However, with its first convention (in June 2016), a partnership with the Association for Slavic, East European, and Eurasian Studies (ASEEES), MAG began to widen the focus to countries in Eastern Europe, the Caucasus, and Central Asia.

The convention we open today continues the trend toward broader internationalism. We welcome colleagues from any and all world areas who are interested in historical or contemporary issues relevant to Eastern Europe and Eurasia.

We look forward to MAG's third convention, again jointly sponsored with ASEEES, in Zagreb in summer 2019. And, after that, to a tradition of MAG annual conventions for many years to come.

Welcoming Remarks

Rev. Bohdan Prach, Rector of the Ukrainian Catholic University

Liliya Hrynevych, Minister of Science and Education of Ukraine

Andriy Sadovyi, Mayor of Lviv

Oleksandr Sushko, Executive Director of the International Renaissance Foundation

William Rosenberg, Past President, Association for the Slavic, East European and Eurasian Studies (ASEEES)

Georgii Kasianov, President of the International Association for Humanities (MAG)

Andrzej Tymowski, Director of International Programs at the American Council of Learned Societies and University of Warsaw

Moderator (in Ukrainian): Oleh Turiy, Vice Rector of the Ukrainian Catholic University

Keynote Address "Between objectivity and belonging: Toward an agenda for the humanities"

East European and Eurasian societies are different in many ways, but their systems of higher education and research have in common certain intellectual and ethical challenges, which the speakers identify as rooted in the problematic relation between objectivity and belonging, especially in regard to the humanities. The complexity of that relation questions the role of the university in the nation, the position of the researcher in society, and the political responsibility of the public intellectual

Tatiana Shchytsova, European Humanities University, Vilnius

Valeria Korablyova, Taras Shevchenko National University of Kyiv (Ukraine) / University of Basel (URIS Fellow)

Moderator: Andrzej Tymowski, American Council of Learned Societies and University of Warsaw

June 29, Fri (Day 3)

16:30-18:00

(location: Dining Hall 'Trapezna')

Convention Roundtable “Rethinking the University for the 21st century”

Globalization in politics and international relations, which until recently seemed unstoppable, is now being disrupted by many versions of “localization.” What about the university in Eastern Europe and Eurasia? Should its vision be global or local? Will academic freedom survive?

How should universities prepare students intellectually, culturally, and ethically for the new uncertainties of the 21st century?

Panelists:

Bishop Borys Gudziak, Ukrainian Catholic Eparchy of Saint Volodymyr the Great of Paris and the Ukrainian Catholic University

Angela Brintlinger, Ohio State University

Andrzej Tymowski, American Council of Learned Societies and University of Warsaw

Moderator: Volodymyr Turchynovskyy, Dean of Social Sciences, Ukrainian Catholic University

HiT-1-02 ♦ Natural Landscapes of the Dnipro Region: Historical Memory and Self-identification of Ukrainians / Природні ландшафти Придніпров'я: історична пам'ять та самоідентифікація українців

Presentation Languages: Ukrainian, English

Location: 203-SC

The concept of «own» is based not only on linguistic, ritual and customary traditions, but on the perception of certain natural landscapes. The modern territory of Ukraine includes most of the natural landscapes inherent in Europe, but most of the population lives on the Dnipro plains. The formation of the Ukrainian ethnic group, and then the nation, is based on many factors, but one of the main was and remains the marker of belonging to the Dnipro frontier as a meeting place between two civilizations – Asian and European. The most important river of Ukraine is part of the continuous historical memory and self-identification of Ukrainians. In the collective historical memory, the phenomenon of the Dnipro preserves its main attributes: rapids, wetlands, fishing etc. The rhythm and way of life of the inhabitants of the Dnipro villages was quite closely corrected with cyclic natural processes occurring on the river.

Med-1-03 ♦ Gender Politics and Beyond: Identity and Self in Polish Cinema

Presentation Languages: English

Location: 302-SC

Polish cinema has played a crucial role as a tool for generating self-images of Polish post-World-War-Two society. Relatively more immune to political censorship thanks to the nature of the medium that leaves a limited space for independent self-expression between the word of the scrip and the recorded photographic image, Polish film has reflected the historical experiences, in particular periods of societal turmoil, as well as the moral dilemmas of modern Poles. As is usually the case, the mirroring effect of cinema has also contributed to its ability to shape the attitudes of its viewers. Generally speaking, the emerging image of the Polish national community has relied on constructions of often conflicted and complex male agency and an allegorically laden femininity. To what extent has this image been a part of a variety of “instrumentalized narratives”? Our panel proposes to engage in a critical re-evaluation of the cinematic image of Polish collective identity by juxtaposing some of the troubling elements of the prevalent constructions of femininity with a dissenting focus on the individual self that is present in the cinema of Malgorzata Szumowska, one of Poland’s most prominent contemporary filmmakers. Thus, Iwona Kurz looks at representations of violence against women in Polish cinema, while the contributions of Daria Mazur and Izabela Kalinowska identify crucial aspects of Szumowska’s cinematic self

HiS-1-04 ♦ Soviet “We” and Soviet “I” in the Art, Memoirs, and Everyday Practices of the 1920s -1930s / Радянське “ми” і радянське “я” в мистецтві, спогадах і щоденних практиках 1920-х - 1930-х рр.

Presentation Languages: Ukrainian, English

Location: 303-SC

The 1920s–1930s are the formative years in the Soviet history. Some consider them a period of the greatest modernization experiment in history. Others stress the violent methods used and the price paid, with focus on the terror, repressions, collectivization and the Holodomor. The opponents agree in that the social agenda –creation of an obedient uniform society and the New Soviet Man – is a key for the understanding of the period.

The panel will address the social agenda of the 1920s–1930s from a number of angles. Roman Liubavskiy and Oksana Klymenko in their papers focus on the workers of Soviet industrialization and their understandings of the period, collective, and the “self”. Roman Liubavskiy’s macrohistorical survey on (the factors of) workers’ identity formation is supplemented by Oksana Klymenko’s case study on the “memory project” implemented upon the workers of DniproHES to mold their “correct” understanding of the “socialist building” and their own place in it. Stanislav Menzelevskiy’s paper addresses the panel topic from a somewhat different perspective. His focus is on the New Culture seen as an important instrument for the creation of Soviet subjects. Stanislav Menzelevskiy draws on the example of Ivan Kavaleridze and his “film operas” (kinoopera), seen as a specific stream in the socialist realism (sotsrealism) allowing for raising a number of issues essential for the understanding of the social and also national politics in the period.

Presentation Languages: English, Belarusian, Russian

Location: 402-SC

At beginnings of Belarusian identity was Skaryna - first secular figure who clearly articulate his Belarusian national identity. In 16th century also the Reformation and its leaders S. Budny and V.Tyapinsky involved in the formation of Belarusian national and patriotic traditions. But the following centuries of polonization and Russification deformed national identity of Belarusians. The panel discusses various aspects of formation of Belarus identities in chronological section: its formation in 16th century; its confessional aspect in 17th century; Litvinsky patriotism of Michal Oginsky who presented itself as Pole; Belarus national historiography of second half of 19 – beginning of 20 century as an alternative to Russian and Polish projects; the role of the First World War, a refugee on the growth of national consciousness of Belarusians; difficulties of integrating of the Orthodox clergy and believers into Soviet society in the post-war BSSR.

HiE-1-06 ♦ Struggling for a healthy nation: from legislation to hygienic movements in the Russian Empire and Austria-Hungary

Presentation Languages: English

Location: 403-SC

This panel focuses on the ways state officials and physicians addressed the issue of the health of citizens in two empires, the Russian Empire and Austria-Hungary. Since the 18th century, health and healthcare have been considered not private but public affairs. The ways of maintenance and improvement of nation’s health in imperial era evolved from state attempts to control unlicensed practitioners in the 18th century to hygienic movements in the 19th century-early 20th century. The papers proposed in the panel discuss state officials and physicians struggled for health of nations and examine their self-representations in imperial medical discourse

У пошуках автентичності, або як культурна критика розпізнає й моделює обриси себе та своїх спільнот

Presentation Languages: Ukrainian

Location: 127-SC (Park room)

The institute of cultural critique emerged in response to the need to somehow reconnect the arts with its audience along with the scope of actual culture in which they further develop. But now criticism is more concerned with the ways in which cultural production, cultural practices and cultural forms reconnect the aesthetical with the political in widest configurations. While globalization seems to homogenize our experiences and description languages of here and now, living cultures are full of complexities and nuanced differences.

The podium debate is intended to assess the current state of cultural critique as a cross-disciplinary field determining those key plots and models which society both borrows and creates. It is aimed at analyzing these models, based on the Ukrainian situation of one advanced encounter - the hybrid war - and the double “after”: the post-communist and post-colonial.

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian, Belarusian, Russian

Location: 002-SC (0 flour)

Participants of the panel would like to discuss the controversial phenomena of collective memories in the post-Soviet Ukraine, Russia and Belarus as manifestations of the divergent strategies of searching the “collective Self”. Our aim is to reveal the points of historical narratives’ shifts, various in the noted countries. The modes of reaction on a “neighbor” narration’s development also have for us crucial meaning.

Hil-1-09 ♦ Self-presentation in historians' academic and personal writing of 19th to early 20th century

Presentation Languages: Russian, Ukrainian

Location: 205-AB

The panel includes investigations dealing with historians' life strategies and value orientations, in particular, through the analysis of various versions of their self-presentation. The authors take as a point of departure the idea that historians' self-presentation largely depended on their belonging to particular communities. At the same time, every historian could be simultaneously a member of different communities: academic, socio-political and national. It is important in connection with this to examine how historians' identities were constructed in overlapping strategies of self-presentation, which manifested both a belonging to "one's own" and an opposition to "alien" or "other" communities. The presentations will focus on historians' academic and personal writings, paying particular attention to the methods of re"180-0covering and analyzing images of the "self" through the study of narrative, emotional and communicative aspects of historians' self-presentation.

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian, Russian
Location: 305-AB

The Panel deals with the person's connection with the city which is conceptualized as "urban identity". This conceptualization gives the opportunity to envision not only the level of the connection but also it's quality. Papers deals with experience of different cities (Kharkiv, Kyiv, Vilnius) in perceiving and construction of their identity. In broader context the subject of discussion is how people perceive and interpret not only their belonging to the certain city but also their being the urban dwellers generally. The attempt to discuss an interdisciplinary approach to urban studies is one of the main aims of the panel.

Nar-1-14 ♦ Ukrainian Writers in Revolution and Ukrainian Revolution in Writers: Biographies, Texts, and Contexts / Українські письменники в революції та українська революція у письменниках: Біографії, тексти та контексти

Location: 307-AB

The centenary of the Ukrainian Revolution 1917–1921 makes the rethinking and reanalyzing of its concept a burning task, both for historians and specialists in literature. On the one hand these eventful revolutionary years provoked the appearance of the new generation of Ukrainian writers and poets, who were contemporaries and participants of the Revolution, on its different sides; on the other hand they became the turning point in writers’ destinies, and evoked a great number of diverse revolutionary narratives. Unfortunately many of these narratives are forgotten.

By examining both the activity of Ukrainian writers during the Ukrainian Revolution 1917–1921 and their reception of the Revolution afterwards, the panelists address the following questions: Who and what were Ukrainian writers during the Ukrainian Revolution? How did they describe the Revolution in their texts in 1917, early 1920s, late 1920s and later on? Why and how did they write about Revolution? What stories, novels, poems, and satiric texts about the Ukrainian Revolution are well-known and which ones are unknown even for specialists? What was happening to these Ukrainian writers, how were their fates formed?

Presentation Languages: English, Belarusian, Ukrainian
Location: 302-SC

Eastern Europe is marked by a sign of communist rule with the central historical myth of the October Revolution of 1917. The 100th anniversary of this event was widely celebrated in the world, given the scale of influence on world history. But in post-communist countries this anniversary is included in the close network of the politics of memory and directly depended on the actual political situation. The Ukrainian-Russian conflict also had a huge impact on the politics of memory in the region. Within the framework of the panel, we will consider whether this anniversary became a farewell to the communist past

/ Самоідентифікація, сприйняття ризику та здоров'я
серед підлітків

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian, Russian

Location: 403-SC

This panel will discuss the perception of self, health and risk among adolescents and the impact on behaviours and motivation to access health and social services, by bringing together findings from three diverse studies.

This first study is the cross-national Health Behaviour in School-Aged Children (HBSC) survey which aims to gain insight into young people's well-being, health behaviours and their social contexts. This presentation will focus on findings related to health, body image, sexual behavior and sexual orientation from the survey across Europe.

The second study is "The Voices, Values and Preferences of Adolescents on HIV Testing and Counselling" conducted with the technical support of United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF). Presenters will provide some background on challenges and barriers to health and social services among adolescents.

Lastly, the panel will showcase some findings from a cross-sectional study "Estimating female sex workers' early HIV risk and the implications for HIV epidemic control" supported by the Canadian Institutes of Health Research. This study examines HIV risk among adolescent girls and young women through the lens of their sexual life course from first sex to engagement of transactional sex and finally formal entry into sex work. This presentation will focus on young women's perception of sex work and risk practices

Lit-2-08 ♦ Roundtable “Poetry in transition: Russian-language Poetry and New Configuration of Post-Soviet Cultural Landscape after 2014” / Русскоязычная поэзия и трансформация постсоветских литератур после 2014 года

Presentation Languages: Russian

Location: 002-SC (0 floor)

Russia's invasion to Ukraine in 2014 was accompanied with the large-scale shift of the trends in internal and external propaganda. From that moment on, Russia has been re-positioned not as a multi-ethnic empire, but as a center of the "Russian World," in other words, as an expansionist nation-state. Authors writing in Russian in the post-Soviet states were facing a crucial choice: to join the new nationalist and jingoistic trend, to avoid this participation, or to overtly resist the idea of "Kremlin-based" collective mobilization, and thus, to revisit one's political and cultural position. One can suggest that this new semantic-political frame brought about quick transformations of style, imagery and/or rhetoric of some poets and prose-writers. As changes in poetry are usually quicker than those in prose, poetry acquires specific significance in this framework. The new understanding of a role of the Russian language in post-Soviet literatures is a paramount element of these changes. Since 2014, some authors have reconsidered Russian as a language of "minor writing" (G. Deleuze, F. Guattari) that undermines conventions of any consistent nation-building or of any consistent nationalist narratives. This roundtable will allow scholars who study poetry of diverse post-Soviet states, like Estonia, Latvia, Ukraine, and Kazakhstan, to engage in an enriching dialog

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian

Location: 205-AB

Both Uniate and Orthodox Church played the main role in the intellectual, social and political processes in Ukrainian society in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The first Ukrainian historical narratives, mythos and „places of memory” are exactly of the Church origin. The Church hierarchs took part in the crucial events of political and social life in Early-Modern Ukraine. This panel focuses on the problem of Orthodox and Uniate Church intellectuals’ presentation of Church and its mission in society during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries

Presentation Languages: Russian

Location: 206-AB

Poetry is a tool for transferring intimate and private matters (i.e. a person's subjectivity and related feelings and emotions) onto the level of the public; hence it is historically contingent on modes of publicity which organize public spaces 'here and now'. Sometimes a poet can turn into 'performer' who is granted a voice along with personal appearance and individual biography, at other times, poets remain almost anonymous, hiding behind initial letters of the name.

At the round table, we propose to examine this variety of modes and strategies of self-presentation in public spaces (from salons to stadiums). Moreover, we are interested in studying social and political factors that determine why poets choose a particular strategy. In this regard, we would like to discuss, for example, a) late Soviet 'semi-publicity' and 'communities of our own kinds of persons' (term coined by A. Yurchak), b) contemporary 'post-publicity' generated by social media, where the boundary between the private and public is being blurred; therefore, novel opportunities for self-presentation are being shaped

Soc-5-17 ♦ Cross-national comparative research as means of understanding oneself

Presentation Languages: English

Location: 208-AB

International comparative studies are an important way to understand oneself and the other since the formation of an identity, both individual and collective, requires an association with another. Neighbouring countries, linked by common historical and political experiences, usually have a lot of stereotypes about each other. Only in the comparative perspective we find reference points for the perception and assessment of ourselves and of others.

The proposed panel would be dedicated to analysing the value portrait of our countries from different angles: political attitudes, religion, life satisfaction and happiness, etc.

This panel provides four case studies of shifting representations of national selfhood, each highlighting the way in which Western (e.g. Scotland, Spain) and Eastern (e.g. Poland, Ukraine, Russia) identities contribute to each other unexpected ways. The four panelists examine a) the Scottish photographer Warrick’s representation of the Russian society in which he lived; b) the post-Soviet use of English calques in Russian discourse of identity; c) the reinvention of “national” dishes in Polish “tapas” and gluten-free “pirogi”; and d) transformative images of the (happy) Russian self in Aleks Dubas’ book Momenty schast’ia

Location: 405-AB

The panel addresses multiple manifestations of landscapes of memory in present-day Ukraine and Moldova. By bringing together cases of the most recent use of lieux de memoire, monuments/sculptures and memory about canonical figures, the panel intends to discuss agency, methods, and tools, as well as dissonance of landscapes of memory in these neighboring countries. The panel seeks to initiate a discussion on the following: to what extent do the most recent (and often competing) uses of tangible sites of collective memory demonstrate the plurality of images of the self in the region?

Idn-3-02 ♦ Jewish Identity in the 20th century: Verdict vs Dilemma /

Єврейська ідентичність у ХХ ст.: вирок vs дилема

Presentation Languages: Ukrainian, Russian

Location: 203-SC

The panel is devoted to the issues of the manifestation of Jewish identity under the influence of different historical and ideological conjunctures. On the example of the three plots, the evolution of the attitude of Jews toward their ethnicity is revealed: during the construction of socialist culture throughout 20's-30's in Leningrad, under the conditions of Nazi occupation and the threat of total extermination in Rivne, and in the conditions of silence about the Holocaust and anti-Zionist propaganda of the late Soviet period. The problem of self-identification of Jewry is considered through the prism of the correlation of one's own choice and the dictates imposed by the dominant social order

Idn-3-03 ♦ Coexistence or confrontation? Rethinking Crimea and its people / Співіснування чи протиборство? Переосмислення Криму та населення

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian, Russian

Location: 302-SC

After the annexation of Crimea it has become obvious that the peninsula was and, to some extent, still remains a terra incognita for Ukrainian society, while the history of Crimean Tatars has never been integrated into Ukrainian national historical narrative. This panel deals with questions that emerged after collapse of a Soviet Union and are deeply rooted into Post-War history of Crimean Peninsula. We can say without doubts that deportation influenced on self-perception of Crimean Tatars profoundly and the will to return become the core idea of this small nation. On the other hand, the changes in national structure of Crimea that had been made by Soviet authorities have become a crucial feature of Post-Soviet peninsula political and social climate. Demands of Crimean Tatars for restoring of historical justice and returning the land have started a confrontation with authorities and local population that identified themselves as Russians.

Lit-3-04 ♦ Media and politics in contemporary poetry / Медиа и политика в современной поэзии

Presentation Languages: English and Russian

Location: 303-SC

Contemporary poetry is consciously political and shows a wide range of forms of engagement, trying not to reduce, but on the contrary, to increase its poetic qualities through experiments, hermeneutic, transgressions of genre and medial boundaries, as well as social norms and taboos. In social media, poetry has become an effective means of plural communication in political discourses with numerous participants and is developing between the poles of propaganda and heightened criticism. The section deals with experimental forms of poetry with a political setting

HiE-3-06 ♦ The public side of private life: self-representation of the family in written sources of early modern time / Публічний бік приватного життя: саморепрезентація родини у писемних джерелах ранньомодерного часу

Location: 403-SC

Family life is one of the main markers of social life. However, in Ukrainian materials of pre-modern times this phenomenon is studied rather fragmentarily and one-sidedly. Most of the available studies operate with bipolar evaluation categories from image of idyllic family to emphasis on patriarchy and cruel relationships that were inherent in family life “in old times”. In any case, the historian works with modern notions and constructs to describe the traditional society, and therefore automatically updates it on the pages of new texts. On the other hand, this is due to “pressure of sources” as well. Even the most professional researcher can hardly avoid the magic of Baroque rhetoric, according to which authors of early modern writings depicted their own family, themselves and their families

Pol-3-07 ♦ Roundtable: “Political risks and consequences for International Business. Analyzing the Post-soviet Space”

Presentation Languages: English

Location: 127-SC (Park room)

In the OECD-area states provide security business to be conducted through a legal-institutional framework where state institutions, working in a legal-rational, predictable and effective manner, are often taken for granted. Worldwide, however the situation is very different. Private actors seize public institutions and processes accumulating ever more power and private wealth by systematically abusing, side-stepping, ignoring and tailoring formal institutions to fit their interests. Such forms of 'state capture' are associated with specific political risks international businesses are confronted with when operating in these countries, such as institutional ambiguity, systematic favouritism and systemic corruption. This panel covers state capture, political risks and international business from the perspectives of Political Science and International Business Studies. Uniting theoretical approaches and empirical insights, it examines country specific forms of state capture and the associated political risks bridging the gap between political analysis and business related impacts

Location: 002-SC (0 floor)

The proposed discussion is focused on Ukrainian identity, exposed in self-perceptual visions of artists and scientists and their narratives. The analysed phenomenon is being reviewed via the course of evolution from XIX century (the period of intensive formation of European nations) till present. Thus the attempt to elaborate the most essential factors for both: Ukrainians selfperception building process as well as for the process of the formation of their sense of belonging to the nation is being made

HiS-3-10 ♦ Imagining and Managing Death and the Dead across the Soviet Period

Presentation Languages: English, Russian

Location: 206-AB

The Communist Revolution – and perhaps revolutions more generally – was a battle of the living against death and the dead. Ideologically, this was about rejecting the past, tradition, and existing forms of authority and legitimacy. But the battle against death and the dead also took place on a material plane, because many of the debates about the meaning of death, and about what to do with dead bodies, continued – and mirrored – debates about the meaning of life and how to manage the living. The question of what to do with death as an ideological category, and with the dead as a material reality, was a central question that demanded an answer, because the failure to answer the question threatened to expose the tensions between Communism’s ideological promises and the material reality of Soviet lived experience. This panel traces what happened to the meaning, practice, and infrastructure of death from the October Revolution through the post-Soviet period. Anna Sokolova’s paper, “Struggling for Equal Burial: Funeral Management in the Early Soviet Union,” examines the vision and reality of Soviet efforts to transform the death care industry, focusing primarily on the early Soviet period.

Victoria Smolkin's paper, "In Search of the Soviet Way of Death: Ideology, History, and Memory in one Soviet Cemetery," continues this story into the postwar era and examines the tensions between ideology, history, and memory as these played out in one of the most ambitious Soviet projects to manage and represent death: the Baykovo Memorial Complex in Kiev, Ukraine. Sergey Mokhov's paper, "'Ideal breakdowns': Infrastructure and Post-Soviet Death," follows the story into the post-Soviet period, looking at the ruptures and continuities in Russian death care following the death of the Soviet project.

HiE-3-12 ♦ Identity and practice of relations between soldiers & society in the period of transition to the professional army in Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth / Самасвядомасць і практыкі адносінаў паміж жаўнерамі і грамадствам ў перыяд перахода да прафесійнайга войска ў Рэчы Паспалітай
Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian, Belarusian, Russian
Location: 305-AB

Panel will be devoted to: the military traditions of various ethnic and social communities of Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth, identity of individual soldiers and military corporations, the practice of relations between soldiers and society in the period of transition to the professional army in the 15th - 17th centuries. We are interested in how the soldiers saw themselves, and which way the image of soldiers created in the minds of society. How ideal status and role of “chivalry” adapting to hard military reality. We will try to trace how the duties of defending the Homeland among praising descendants and contemporaries aroused mixed feelings, especially if they went to the need for military support. How needs of country protection to bring into line with modern trends met with the traditional vision and the technique of military affairs, and was transformed into a militarist tradition of East-Central Europe. How to get accustomed and used innovations in military affairs in the Grand Duchy of Lithuania and how they affected the fate of society and countries in the region. Also will discuss legal standards and ideological minted, the visual image and the real situation during the war, recruitment and breaks in the fighting

Nar-3-14 ♦ Visual and Verbal Representation of the European Middle Ages (on the example of Kievan Rus) / Візуальна та вербальна репрезентація європейського Середньовіччя (на прикладі Київської Русі)

Presentation Languages: Ukrainian

Location: 307-AB

Panel participants offer a closer look at certain ways and peculiarities of the representation of medieval identity in the cultural and mental/ thinking space, especially in Eastern Europe.

- Cultural, ideological, sociopolitical identities of the Middle Ages: text and image;
- The visual identity of Kievan Rus’;
- Modern interpretations of verbal images of Kievan Rus’;
- Visual self-reflection in the iconographic system of European medieval art.

Modern interpretations of numerous forms of medieval identity involve not only factual reproduction and typological analysis of the texts and artifacts of the medieval past. Our contemplation (in scientific, cultural, mental, and even political dimensions) of the past, which is projected onto our present, is relevant to contemporary society.

As never before, the question of modern manipulative practices in relation to Eastern European Middle Ages has been determined, along with the necessity to find definition of a thin, but principled boundary between manipulation and interpretation..

The topic of visual self-reflection within the limits of the Latin and Kievan Rus' Middle Ages is also offered for consideration within the panel. In both paradigms, real and symbolic, historical and contemporary, the religious and secular interact closely. Through the visual translation, the process through which the image influenced the narrative, the ability to adapt it to another time or unfamiliar cultural geography, and thus became clear to the medieval reader/audience, mechanism were created for reading the image of him(her)self that he(she) show him(her)self a man of the Middle Ages, and how it was depicted him(her)self with artistic means in the coordinates of symbolic-artistic space.

Location: 405-AB

The panel will focus on Ukrainian national minorities in Poland. We would like to present the result of our research on collective as well individual memory of different generation of Ukrainian national minority living in Poland. We will examine the politics surrounding Operation Vistula “Akcja Wisła”, the memories of those who experienced resettlement, and the impact on successive generations of Ukrainian scattered throughout Poland. The presenters will discuss their past and recent research using various mediums to convey the information, including presentations with scholarly analysis on oral history as well sociological interviews. We would like to show how that national identity of Ukrainians born and living outside of their Homeland has been retained by changing its form, specifically from a traditional form to a selective-symbolic form. One presenter will focus on the Ukrainian diaspora in Toronto and Edmonton, particularly the group of the Ukrainians born in Poland who immigrated to Canada in 1980s. Basing on the ethnographic data, collected in 2014-2016 the paper will show the relationship between memory and migration and to concentrate on the fact that (as my fieldwork shows) the memory differentiates the community of the Ukrainians from Poland between the other groups forming the Ukrainian diaspora in Canada: descendants of the Ukrainian pioneer in Alberta, interwar immigrants from then Poland, displaced persons who came after WWII, Ukrainians from former Yugoslavia, and, last but not least, Ukrainians from independent Ukraine who have been arriving since 1991

Presentation Languages: English, Russian, Ukrainian

Location: 303-SC

The image of the contemporary child is clearly reflected in books for children and teens as we will see based on the examples from Polish, Russian, and Ukrainian children’s literature. At the same time, the child-reader sees herself in the multiple mirrors provided by contemporary children’s books. Young readers are able to recognize their feelings and emotions and to learn about new, yet unknown life situations and emotional responses through various literary devices in children’s poetry, prose, and contemporary fairy tales.

HiS-4-06 ♦ Consumption as a way of self-representation in Soviet society: between male, female and humor discourses

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian

Location: 403-SC

“This panel explores consumption as a way of self-representation in Soviet society. It seeks to contribute to the discussions in the field of Soviet history and Consumption studies. The main aim is to find the “faces” of consumers that could be seen through their consumption practices, spaces, commodities, and visual representations. The panel aims at broadening our understanding of Soviet consumption as well as providing several insights into social, gender and, visual history. From the 1920-30s consumption was a valuable ideological and social tool of creating the image of the new Soviet man and woman. The real needs of ordinary male and female workers as well as “red directors” were far from idealistic view, created by ideology. It was said that socialism released a person from the power of things. However, from the early 1920s Socialist ascetism was changed into industrial pragmatism. In the 1930s Stalin committed the “great retreat” in the ideology and formally declared the Soviet people’s right to consume goods. But during the rule of Khrushchev a new slogan appeared: “Everything is for the sake of the people”. Investigating satirical magazines as ‘Crocodile’, ‘Pepper’ (ukr. ‘Perets’), and ‘Hedgehog’ (belorus. ‘Vozhik’) it is possible to find the “hidden face” of Soviet consumer.

Thus the presenters will discuss the following questions: How the Soviet man was represented by the mass culture? How were the Soviet people portrayed: mainly as hard workers or consumers? How the self-representation of the ordinary male worker’s consumer was transformed to those of the “red director”? Did the woman’s solvency fluctuate to satisfy her everyday needs? What was the difference between the women consumption from the different social strata: urban and peasant women, female workers and collective farmers, wives of the Red Army commanders’ and ‘stakhanovka’s?”

Presentation Languages: Ukrainian, Russian

Location: 002-SC (flour 0)

This section discusses how the Churches and believers in Western Ukraine designed their own image in time of cardinal political transformations at the second half of the 20th century. The final incorporation of the territory of Western Ukraine into the USSR was the result of the revision of the state borders after the Second World War. For the first time in modern history, Galicia (Halychyna) and Transcarpathia were included into one state, the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, with its centre of control located in its capital, the city of Kiev. At the same time, the immediate application of the Soviet anti-religious policy, aimed at destroying religious institutions outside of state control and displacing all other religious institutions and Churches from the life of society, was done at these regions. The geopolitical ambitions of the Soviet Union, which resulted in the “liquidation” of the Greco Catholic churches in Central Eastern Europe, led to a radical transformation of the religious landscape of Western Ukraine. This gave every priest and believer the new task of having to understand/rethink/reform their own religious identity. Within the framework of this section the following topics will be addressed: how the clergy and believers perceived and positioned themselves at the different levels of the new system (both ecclesiastical and political), such as the individual level of clergy, the parishes, eparchies; the Ukrainian Republic, and the Soviet Union.

Proposed for discussion is the interpretation in 20th-century fiction (Ukrainian, Crimean Tatar) and cinema of the “new Soviet man” as an individual and “the mass” against the backdrop of communist everyday life in the USSR and other socialist countries such as Ethiopia. The relating by the protagonists of the novels (S. Synhayivsky’s Road to Asmara, L. Kononovych’s Theme for Meditation, and S. Ukhachevsky’s Carpathian Wolf-Trap) to the experience of communist construction in victim/executioner categories (Holodomor, GULAG, the deportation of Crimean Tatars). The experience of service in a colonial army and exposure to the Other (native Africans, Westerners); moral degradation and polarization in society; the exile and subsequent repatriation of “traitor nations”; the ethic issues of social climb to the top of political and financial power; individual opposition to Authority and punitive psychiatry; and atheistic “existence without God” vs. Christian mercy (as personified by Mother Teresa)

Relevance for Ukraine / Інклюзивність та формування нації в пост-колоніальному просторі: актуальність для України

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian

Location: 305-AB

Among the topical issues of nation and state-building in post-totalitarian, post-colonial societies, significant attention has been paid to the formation of political nation, consolidation of the state on the foundations of freedom and human rights and consequently, the defense of the all sections of minorities: ethnic, religious, linguistic and others. The proposed panel looks into some of these issues from multi-disciplinary and multi-institutional points of view, involving representatives of the panel, who are researchers and publicists based in NGO (East European Development Institute), as well as teaching staff and researchers of higher educational institutions (Ivan Franko Lviv National University, Ukrainian Catholic University ). The moderator is an expert on International Relations and Foreign Policy and the discussant representing the Culture Studies Department of Ukrainian Catholic University. The presenters will reflect on both the positive and negative experiences in the world, what worked and what did not work, i.e. the experience of Ukrainian minority in Poland and their positive experience of integration and inclusion, and the negative history of the disenfranchised Dalit (untouchables) women in post-colonial India. Researching, preserving and promoting the cultural heritage of minorities and vulnerable groups are equally important for their inclusion, and this issue will be focused in the presentation on the Transcarpathian “White Romas” (“Voloxy”) from the ethnomusicological aspect. Overall, the panel raises the question of mainstreaming the vulnerable in the post-colonial discussion and its relevance for building a strong rule of law state and civil society in Ukraine

Location: 306-AB

The panel will involve a discussion about different problems that appear during a research of local collaborators and their role in realization of Nazi violence in occupied Ukraine including, but not limited to Holocaust and mass killing of patients of psychiatric hospitals. Specifically, discussion will focus on the practice of the postwar prosecution of local collaborators and their behavior during investigative procedures and judicial trials: which lines of defence did they choose? Were the Soviet investigators prepared to document their explanations? What “image of the self” did the local perpetrators of Nazi violence try to construct - innocent victims of circumstances, wax in somebody’s hands, true “Soviet people” who were ready to wash away guilt? All disputants have solid experience working with Soviet investigation documents from archives of former KGB and can present results of their researches in the context of regional, time and gender peculiarities

HiE-5-01 ♦ Sloboda Ukraine in the late Eighteenth Century: Imperial Integration and Cultural Changes / Слобідська Україна наприкінці XVIII століття: імперська інтеграція і культурні зміни

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian

Location: 202-SC

The panel deals with the cultural changes provoked by the abolition of the Sloboda Ukraine's autonomy and its political and social integration into the Russian Empire during the reign of Catherine II. It adopts the perspective of cultural history to assess the consequences of the politics of imperial integration for the region. It focuses on the changing image of Sloboda Ukraine in the symbolical geography of the Russian Empire in the second half of the eighteenth century. It also examines cultural changes brought to the region by the imperial bureaucracy and the Russian gentry as well the impact of the imperial integration on the intellectual communities and intellectual networks in the Sloboda Ukraine of the late eighteenth century

Gen-5-02 ♦ Image of the Female Self at Times of Mass Violence

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian and Russian

Location: 203-SC

Our panel seeks to examine the way individual women represent themselves to themselves and to others during the times of mass violence in Ukraine. In particular, we look at female members of the Ukrainian Sich Riflemen during WWI, female perpetrators of the 1932-1933 famine and female participants of OUN-UPA. Their representation manifested itself via language, choices they made and ultimately their actions. Through three different examples we will suggest that gender stereotypes impacted their experiences and instrumentalized narratives they produced.

Lit-5-04 ♦ Peasants and Poets, Revolutions and Continuities: Self-Representation in Ukrainian Literature from the 1890s to the Present Day

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian

Location: 303-SC

Throughout the 20th century and beyond, Ukrainian culture has constantly had to deal with the several challenges that changing social and political conditions have imposed on its intellectuals, in a climate of continuous upheavals and consuming, though also exciting uncertainty. Modern Ukrainian literature has thus had to carry the burden of both narrating – and co-creating – national identity, on the one hand, and registering and coping with the challenges of history, on the other. This round table will focus on the multiple problematics that Ukrainian prose and poetry have been facing since the end of the 19th century while attempting to understand and depict Ukrainian identity in the astonishing variety of its historical, geographical and social components. The panel will underline how the need for self-representation has constituted one of the defining elements in the development of modern Ukrainian culture, dwelling on the complexity and the ambiguous underpinnings of Ukrainian writers’ image of the self.

Lit-5-05 ♦ New Formats of Contemporary Poetry / Новые форматы современной поэзии

Presentation Languages: Russian

Location: 402-SC

The genre system crisis did not cause a complete abolishment of formal constant markers and unities of content and form in the contemporary poetry. In order to denominate them, authors of the 'Poetry. Textbook' introduced and put into practice in the critical and scientific community a concept of 'format' which, unlike genre, is much more processual and mobile in nature: it is not predetermined and authors form it every time 'here and for now'. These new formats need to be described and conceptualised properly

Presentation Languages: English, Russian

Location: 403-SC

This panel focuses on multi-directional changes in professional and institutional identities during Khrushchev’s years. The Thaw period in Soviet history is usually characterised as a turning point in various aspects. Leaving aside the issue of who actually opened the ‘windows of opportunities’ in the 1950s, this panel focuses on those who attempted to use the opportunities in order to redefine the borders of their professional expertise. Three case-studies will demonstrate how various groups used different strategies to broaden the boundaries of possible self-realisation without struggling with the regime and push the ideas which seemed to be marginal inside professional milieus to the centre of discussions. Analysing different institutions which experienced substantial shifts during the Thaw - Soviet architecture, literature and higher education - the panelists seek to explore how general shifts of the post-Stalin period influenced the attitude toward the profession among Soviet intelligentsia; how did professional, Soviet and other identities correlate in changing political context in the late 1950s; how different actors and groups searched the balance between given professional tasks and their creative initiatives

Presentation Languages: English

Location: 127-SC (Park room)

This roundtable discussion brings together five experts in the fields of human rights, law, religion, development, culture and the arts. Diversity is a term oftentimes taken for granted or overlooked, yet its highly variable meanings present complex challenges for the practices of free speech and the rule of law when we consider the origins and circulation of its definition at different points in history and across national borders. What are the consequences of “diversity” for the jurisprudence and praxis of free speech, education, media communications, international conflict resolution, anti-corruption, and other discourses shaping the ideas of “civil society” and “the public sphere” in Ukraine today?

Presentation Languages: Belarusian, Russian, Ukrainian

Location: 002-SC (flour 0)

The Roundtable will be focused on an emotional dimension of social (political and cultural) life. It is based on the premise that a contemporary analysis of social and political processes must go beyond (overcome) the classical hierarchy between emotion and reason. Correspondingly, a relevant theorizing of emotions as markers and indicators of respective identities (both individual and collective) and social relations is needed. With regard to this, the roundtable aims to discuss so called “emotional identities” and, speaking more generally, emotional foundations of various political communities (or movements) in post-soviet East-European countries in the current political and cultural contexts. Moreover, different political emotions will be addressed in connection with such phenomena as “information warfare” and “propaganda” and political technologies

The panel deals with the complex issues of religious self-identification in the early-modern societies through the study of the cult of saints, miraculous icons, written and printed monuments and legislative acts. It will focus on the territories of the Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth and the Russian Empire, where the representatives of three major denominations lived and interacted: Catholics, Orthodox, Uniates. It is planned to present both the elite and the popular level in the “religious imaginary of themselves”.

Nar-5-16 ♦ The Overt and Covert Language Aggression during the Own Identity Manifestation

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian

Location: 309-AB

The language violence is inseparable from a conflict proceeding, especially concerning the new types of hybrid conflicts which occur in the public communication. This point is also quite valid regarding the several public discourses in Ukraine. Thus, the current discourses on national and regional identity in Ukraine are based on the fact that each speaking actor during his own identity manifestation clearly defines the Self and delineates the boundaries between his own group and the Others. Such manifestation can be argumentative or aggressive. In the proposed panel, the first presenter builds up the linguistic and pragmatic theory and contrasts the argumentative and aggressive self-positioning in discourse. Based on this, the second presenter explores the verbalization of exaggerated regional patriotism and its conflict potential (by the topical example of Donbass). The third report in a co-authorship discusses the (non-) aggressive manifestations of the national identity in Ukraine and several tactics of its justifying in the public discourse. Under the interdisciplinary framework, the panelists will address an issue, how is the overt and covert language aggression used in the order to establish the Self, and how destructive can it be in the contemporary Ukrainian context

The question of identity of Ukrainian nation belonged to the most important topics of modern Ukrainian history. The very complicated position of Ukrainian nation in the 20th century without its own independent state, for long time being part of several different states, and then united in the Soviet state, stood behind the various antagonistic processes of modern formation of Ukrainian nation. While this panel has no ambition to discuss all those processes in full view it offers three case studies of different periods in 20th century suggesting how difficult the formation of Ukrainian identity was

Nar-6-02 ♦ Undertaking a Rusyn Vision of Self in Writing

Presentation Languages: English

Location: 203-SC

As Elaine Rusinko detailed in her 2003 study, Straddling Borders, Rusyn literature has historically been a response to social conditions, an affirmation of identity, and a strategy to ensure national survival. This panel explores three 20th century examples which highlight this struggle in depth, as authors try to respond to the conditions and places in which they find themselves - usually not by their own choice, but as the result of external political and religious goals. The multi-disciplinary panel will discuss works written by and for community insiders and outsiders in an exploration of how Rusyns have created and presented their vision of self, and whether or not these texts contribute to a successful formation of identity and relationship to the traditional Rusyn homeland.

While much was spoken about the Reformation last year, thanks to the 500th anniversary, no words were devoted to the “Confessionalisation” in other churches, especially in the Uniate (Greek-Catholic) one. This panel covers the confessionalisation-process during the history of the Uniate Church, as for defining “image of the self” in strange surroundings, that is, in foreign cultures by one hand, and in repression, on the other hand. Presentation Languages: Ukrainian

Situation of military conflicts, as well as any radical social cataclysms, results in the destruction of the main structures of everyday life. On the panel we will discuss women’s experience of living under the occupation. Our main thematic focus concerns women’s self-representations and self-visions of their experience of occupation during World War II and current Russian-Ukrainian war. Key issue of our panel will be self-visions of ordinary women in the categories of “wrong” and “correct” models of behavior: how they explain their collaboration; how they normalize for themselves their current situation; how they understand what it mean – betrayal, heroic action, and resistance movement.

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian, Russian

Location: 208-AB

National history as a specific form of history writing creates a history of one’s own nation. At the same time, it often constructs histories of neighbors as the history of the Our Heroes, Aliens and Other. The image of the owner Heroes is complicated and is based on both historical myths and current political tendencies.

The treatment of Ukrainian past in contemporary Ukrainian and Russian historiography is a characteristic example of this tendency. This past often turns in a battleground between Russian and Ukrainian scholars. How was the image of early modern Russian polices connected with Ukrainian history as the Our constructed in contemporary Russian and Ukrainian historiography and why? What strategies of orientalization were used? How the changes in the assessment of the key figures from the Ukrainian and Russian past were related to the methodological and ideological changes in Russian and Ukrainian academic historiographies?

This panel will attempt to answer these questions by tracing changes in the image formation of a country in diplomatic relations between Russia and foreign states in 1670s – 1680s, A.L. Ordin-Naschokin and Ivan Mazepa in contemporary Russian and Ukrainian history writing.

Presentation Languages: English, Russian

Location: 405-AB

The proposed reports on a wide range of archival and published sources analyze the forms and ways of self-presentation of revolutionaries of the late XIX - first quarter of the XX century. The authors of the reports show that in the process of presenting himself to the outside world - both sympathetically and hostile - the revolutionary was guided not only by his personal perceptions and feelings, but also by the norms and precepts of the subculture his socium (the subculture of the Russian revolutionary), the adherence to which could come in conflict with personally oriented strategies for the behavior of an individual. So, for example, positioning yourself as an irreconcilable fighter against the regime in the last word of the defendant fully corresponded to the revolutionary's code of conduct in court, but entailed a heavier punishment and the possibility of a death sentence. A “penitent sinner” or “accidentally stumbled” could count on the condescension of the court, but he was expected to be condemned by his comrades and a charge of renunciation (depending on the degree of deviation from the rules of behavior of the revolutionary). Neutral, skeptical, ironic, mocking, challenging look at the prison camera's lens also formed a certain image of the character and convictions of the defendant. After October 1917, the situation was complicated by the fact that the former comrades in struggle were now opposing each other, each side considering itself to be the heir and guardian of the ideas and ideals of the revolution, and its opponents as apostates and traitors.

Presentation Languages: English

Location: 202-SC

This panel aims at broadening our reflections on the cultural production of the “Soviet People” in the later decades of the USSR. The Soviet revolutionary tradition emphasized an imaginative and educational role of Soviet culture: the latter would move to the forefront of the political agenda in order to stimulate the creation of a “New Soviet Man” and “New Soviet Woman.” On the other hand, the Marxist ideology prioritized a scientific worldview, thereby demanding from cultural producers to rely on solid scientific principles of societal development. Be it a press photo, poster, or piece of economic information, the specialist had to study “a real life” and objectively represent it. Thus, the Soviet cultural production gambled on a shaky balance between a vivid inspiration and scientification. How did the mid-1950s turn to mass consumption and popular culture change the situation? How did the greater attention to the audience demand and consumer taste impact on the sphere of cultural production? Among others, we plan to discuss the following questions: who laid a claim to the expert knowledge in order to determine consumer needs and tastes; how the media imagined and shaped the audience; what exactly “being Soviet” meant in the later decades; how much cultural perceptions of the media could diverge from the initial intended messages

Location: 302-SC

Presentations from the diverse cultural contexts and backgrounds are united by the common reflection on memory narrative as a source of understanding of real image of the self, opposite to the simplified mythological images created and imposed by the dominant ideologies. Addressing to the narratives that provoke social disagreement as well as to the texts that, asking difficult questions, propose a point for reconciliation, participants invite to the discussion on the “boundaries of truth” that would determine the vision of self and the image of the “other”.

Presentation Languages: English

Location: 303-SC

Originally published in 1978 as samizdat in Czech, Václav Havel’s “The Power of the Powerless” was critical to both explaining and providing the theoretical underpinning of dissident movements in East-Central Europe prior to 1989 and has been subject to continual reinterpretation. This panel brings together some of the contributors to a special issue of East European Politics and Societies published in the essay’s 40th anniversary year.

HiE-7-05 ♦ Identification in “Strange” Surroundings by the Uniate (Greek-Catholic) Church - from Beginnings up to the Soviet Era

Presentation Languages: English

Location: 402-SC

This panel deals mainly with the Uniate Church as a special phenomenon of identity-shaping, as for defining “image of the self” in strange surroundings, that is, in surrounding of the foreign cultures and in the situation of the repression. The first paper by the great expert in the religious life of Ukraine, prof. Krafchuk, is to give us a picture of the contemporary situation of identity-seeking and -building of the different churches. The second paper by S. Földvári deals with the Uniate clergy in “Western” environment: the circumstances of education of Byzantine liturgy in Roman Catholic seminaries in the Habsburg Empire. The third paper by K. Budz deals with the identity-keeping of the Uniate Church in the last century, when it was denied and destroyed by the Soviet atheist regime. NOTE: this panel is to be close connection with the other panel organized by this same organiser: “Identification” of the Uniate Church this panel as it follows below , and the “Institution-building” of the Uniate Church in the other panel. Pol-7-06 ♦ Identities and perceptions at the western borderlands of Ukraine

Presentation Languages: English

Location: 403-SC

The complex history of experiencing shifting borderlines across western regions of Ukraine has largely influenced national discourse as well as significantly contributed to social narratives, perceptions, and attachments present in the borderlands on the ground. Moreover, possible differences in political, economic and social patterns created by the border effect between the countries part of the European project and countries outside the EU make the borderlands in Western Ukraine an interesting case for studying. According to 2016 Global Strategy for the European Union’s Foreign and Security Policy EU’s eastern borderlands have become salient for increasing the cooperation between Eastern European EU and non-EU members due to the need to strengthen regional stability and security. Having this as a backdrop, the proposed panel inquires in the peculiarities of the social construction of self-identification across the Polish-Ukrainian, Romanian-Ukrainian, and Hungarian-Ukrainian borderlands from a comparative perspective. Employing the mixed method research and bringing the empirical evidence from three case studies, the panel aims at exploring identities and perceptions at the western borderlands of Ukraine and seeks to analyse their potential influence on the current political situation in the region as well as on the bilateral relations of Ukraine with its immediate neighbours – Poland, Romanian, and Hungary

Lit-7-08 ♦ Roundtable: Elizaveta Mnatsakanova’s Lyric / Поэзия Елизаветы Мнацакановой

Presentation Languages: Russian

Location: 002-SC (flour 0)

Elizaveta Mnatsakanova has long ago become a legend of the second avant-garde—a reputation that rests upon her trailblazing collections Shagi i vzdokhi (1982), Vita breve (1994) and ARCADIA (2004) and that was solidified by her émigré life. Forever outside the metropolises of Russian writing, deeply immersed in the culture of radical Western European art (collaborations with Jandl and Artmann, works on display at the Albertina, etc.), Mnatsakanova has come to epitomise the “ideal” trajectory for a Soviet poet outside the empire—a legacy that is intriguingly uncompromised by her aesthetic, political and cultural choices. Along with an affinity to minimalist aesthetic, Mnatsakanova’s writing emphasises repetition, alteration and continuation, which suggests a highly idiosyncratic attitude towards lyric temporality, change and duration in general. The roundtable proposes to celebrate the publication of Elizaveta Mnatsakanova’s new book, Novaia Arkadiia (2018) by addressing her position in today’s russophone lyric. As the ambivalence in her aesthetic and the philosophy it reflects can hardly be divorced from her literary career, her image in the poetic culture of the recent time and her (re)writing practices, we intend to keep in mind the two traditional interests of the Mnatsakanova scholarship (the visual and the sonic in her poetry) while focusing on other questions her life and work pose before us today, such as sameness and change, concreteness and Logos, and self and representation.

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian

Location: 208-AB

The questions of old, premodern identities, characteristic for urban society, are central for panel. For example, estate identities were transforming in class and professional ones, ethnic - in national ones.

The problem of social identity will be one of the most important aspects. Which one, class, estate or professional identity, was central in the city dwellers' life and in which way it influenced their life strategy? Another factor was national identity, how striking were ethnic differences to influence on social interaction and if they were key factors, what were forming distinctions etc. Finally, we will try to discuss a problem of the most significant layer of urban identity and if we could speak about creative destruction by J.Schumpeter not only in context of economics, but also in the spheres of identities

Presentation Languages: Ukrainian

Location: 305-AB

Since its inception, the Russian Empire faced numerous difficulties connected with the incorporation of new lands and groups of people. The state gradually absorbed the new territories with their different political and socio-economic conditions, religions, denominations, and cultures. On the one hand, the state tried to take into account all these features; on the other hand, it was engaged in their unification. Nevertheless, the state, together with the Orthodox Church, directly influenced the communities, their consolidation or destruction, their self-awareness and self-presentation (there were other factors besides the state: proximity of other social and ethnic groups, international political situation, economy, etc.). Moreover, the state often created some new groups (e.g., military regular army) with their own social status, the rhythm of life, and self-positioning in terms of relations with other groups.

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian

Location: 307-AB

The panel focuses on the peculiarity of nation-building in post-Soviet Ukraine gravitating towards several nodal points. The main challenges of (re)inventing the collective Self imply addressing the following issues. How to reconcile different visions of the past? How to integrate internal (especially regional) diversity? And, finally, how to position the country on the symbolic map between the “West” and the “East”, or “Europe” and “Russian world”?

The nineteenth century is sometimes dubbed a “Century of Revolutions”. If it was not indeed revolutionary in terms of new self-construction, it was at least rather transformative in this respect.
At our panel we would like to present three distinct cases of self-construction in 19th-century Russian Empire. The first case will present self-fashioning of Volhynian gentry from the newly acquired Polish lands in conditions of isolation, on the one hand, and need to somehow adapt to new environment, on the other. The second case will touch upon traveler who was visiting various places in the empire while trying to discover his own identity vis-à-vis strangers he was meeting during his journey. The third case examines schoolgirls from various institutions of secondary education in Kyiv whose identity was constructed to meet the normalizing gender requirements established for them. With these cases we intent to demonstrate how different but at the same time complimentary the ways of self-fashioning or self-construction of that era could be

The focus of the panel is struggle for and against the Union in Western republics of the USSR in 1988-1991. The special emphasis will be placed on activities of Pro-Soviet organizations. Despite its importance, activities of Pro-Soviet organizations were not the subject of many scholar researches. A better understanding of the goals, social structure and political strategies of Pro-Soviet organizations in Eastern Europe would help to improve our understanding of Soviet Union disintegration, state-building process in the region, successes and failures of national movements. Additionally, the role of historical studies in struggle for and against USSR dissolution will be examined

Nar-8-03 ♦ Hermeneutical Approach to the Representation of the Image of the Self / Герменевтический подход к репрезентации образа себя

Presentation Languages: English, Russian

Location: 302-SC

The hermeneutical theory now is interdisciplinary approach that one could apply to the wide range of the actual cultural practices. Its primary aim is to deal with the problem of understanding and comprehension both of the Self and of the Other, which would be another existence, the social group, the State, the Language, or the Culture itself. It treats its subject of understanding as representation of the proper image of the human being or world’s phenomena. The representation means in this case such an expression of something that has characteristics of both demonstration of its peculiarities and substitution of the very ontological ground of the phenomenon as such. The hermeneutics of the Self has its long tradition beginning from the hermeneutics of the facticity by M. Heidegger and it works with existential dimension of human and his or her practices of identity, imagination and self-evaluation. The basic milieu of the hermeneutical investigation is some discursive and narrative levels of articulation, but some visual, audial and plastic forms as well. All regions of the contemporary culture are the matter of the hermeneutical examining of senses and values of today’s man.

Presentation Languages: English

Location: 303-SC

2018 marks the 40th anniversary of Václav Havel's landmark essay, The Power of the Powerless. Influential at the time of writing, Havel's penetrating analysis of the power structures of state socialism continues to resonate in the region and around the world. Translated into more than 20 languages, contributors will elaborate and analyze Havel's contemporary global relevance, especially his ideas about power, shared responsibility for "living the lie" and his exhortation to "live in truth" in a variety of political contexts given the rise of nationalist populism, illiberal democracy, and authoritarianism.

/ Політика національної гідності - суспільні корені сучасного польсько-українського конфлікту пам’яті
Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian
Location: 127-SC (Park room)

In recent years, we have been observing an increase in the attention paid on historical issues and politics of memory in international relations. This is particularly true when talking about the relationship between Poland and Ukraine, where one can talk even about the conflict of memory. In both countries, but probably with a stress on Poland, the importance of events from the past and their interpretations has grown so much that it has pushed aside other aspects of mutual Polish-Ukrainian relations. In our research, we asked questions about how Poles and Ukrainians think about history, how they get to know about it and how this importance of the past is reflected in their practice: for example, whether they celebrate historical anniversaries, are they ready to visit the places of historical events etc. We also ask what is the function and meaning of these references to the past in public life – e.g. whether and to what extent they are an element constructing national identity, and maybe also other identities, like local or regional ones. Our results will show what is common in both the images of the past and in the mechanism of their influence on public life, and what is different for Poles and Ukrainians in this respect. We will consider the role of the state institutions in all of this.

It is part of the common knowledge that the images of the past are a social construct and as such they are reflected in the mass media. At the same time, these images are shaped, corrected and disseminated thanks to the media message. The media are also responsible to a large extent for shaping the way in which citizens think about the past and for the circumstances in which they use references to the past. In our panel, we will present the results of three independent studies conducted under the common umbrella of the project “Historical Cultures in Transition: Negotiating Memory, History and Identity in the Contemporary Central and Eastern Europe” (financed by the NCN grant UMO-2016/21/B/HS3/03415): a representative public opinion poll conducted in Poland and Ukraine, qualitative case studies – anthropological studies of small Polish and Ukrainian towns, as well as the analysis of the Polish and Ukrainian media discourse related to history.

HiE-8-08 ♦ New Perspectives on Jewish History and Holocaust Studies in Eastern Europe

Presentation Languages: English, Ukrainian

Location: 002-SC (flour 0)

This panel brings together young scholars of Jewish and Holocaust history who aim to bring attention to voices and experiences of Jewish survivors in Eastern Europe. Panelists will discuss various issues of Jewish life before, during, and in the immediate aftermath of the Holocaust. Dr. Carlos Haas analyzes ego-documents and how Jewish inmates re-think their images of self in the wartime occupied Poland. He argues that social practice of writing by ghetto inmates was a part of a process of self-reflection and comprehension. Dr. Yuri Kaparulin focuses on the Jewish life in the south of Ukraine, in particular on responses of Jewish agrarians towards Soviet policies, 1920-30es. He argues that Soviet policies had a great impact on acculturation of local Jewry despite its ideological and stront anti-religious content. Dr. Pavlo Khudish scrutinizes relations between Jews and non-Jews in postwar Transcarpathia. He is particularly interested in Jewish survivors of concentration camps and their return home. Dr. Khudish focuses on victims' treatment by the Soviet authorities and its impact on Jewish migration.

Ant-8-09 ♦ Practices of Subsidiarity: Personal Freedom / Практики субсидиарности: личная свобода

Presentation Languages: Russian, English, Ukrainian

Location: 205-AB

Subsidiarity is a principle of social organization that holds that social and political issues should be dealt with at the most immediate (or local) level that is consistent with their resolution. Subsidiarity is a general principle of European Union law. The concept as discussed here was first described formally in Catholic social teaching (the neo-Calvinist theological teaching of sphere sovereignty should be kept in mind as well).

We consider subsidiarity as a universal European way of dealing with issues. The objective of our panel is to deliberate how subsidiarity works at an individual level. To justify the claim we explore concepts of freedom, everyday practice, therapy, agency theory, existentialist concepts.

It is extremely important to keep in mind the historical development of European values underlying subsidiarity from the Magna Carta to the Glorious Revolution and the French revolution (and further on). This will help to realize Europe as a living organism with a vivid personality of its own and thereby to grasp why subsidiarity is a sui generis organic purpose of the historical development of Europe. In this context it is important to read both: (1) the principal documents of the EU (Charter of Fundamental Rights, Charter of Local Self-government and others) and (2) some foundational texts by John Locke, the 18th-century French thinkers, and the Germans Leibniz, Lessing and Kant in order to show the truly European way of reflection on the issue.

HiE-8-11 ♦ The Fall of Empire and “Rise of Nationality” in Eastern and Southeastern Europe, 1917-1938

Presentation Languages: English

Location: 208-AB

This panel explores the disintegration of the multi-ethnic Austro-Hungarian, Ottoman and Romanov Empires at the end of the First World War, and the various processes of nation-building employed within the smaller state entities which politically succeeded them; processes articulated by the British historian R.W.Seton-Watson as “the rise of nationality”. In this regard, it seeks to present an alternative to previous historiographical approaches that often frame these processes of transition in Eastern and Southeastern Europe as subordinate to grander narratives, such as the Russian Revolution or the political implications of the Paris Peace Conference in 1919. The panelists will instead consider the role played by elite and local actors in seeking to shape, or consolidate, notions of national identity in these post-imperial spaces. The position of minorities was particularly significant as those perceived as cultural or political deviants from the modern ideal of homogenous nation-hood faced the prospect of persecution, forced assimilation, or even attempted to form their own distinct identities.

/ (Пере)Відкриваючи себе в часи революцій та воєн:
політик, біженець, митець в Україні (1900-1920ті)
Presentation Languages: Ukrainian
Location: 305-AB

Our panel is dedicated to self-identification processes in times of wars and revolutions in Ukraine in 1900-1920s. We will investigate the issue from different points of view taking into account individual cases from Kyiv and Lviv. Our common hypothesis is that during turbulent and transitional times self-identification becomes not only the most problematic, but also the most creative process. Thus, an elaboration of how a person (re)discovers her/himself within new circumstances reacting to new challenges becomes one of the most significant research tasks. Therefore, in our panel we will try to answer the following questions. How did revolutions (1905 and 1917) as well as WWI influence a construction of the Self in Ukraine? What kind of strategies were applied by a person in order to face a changed reality of her/his milieu? How did people from different social backgrounds identify themselves in times of political and social instabilities? In order to answer those questions we will focus on three types of modern identities: a politician, a refugee, an artist. Olha Martynyuk will talk about a populist conservative leader Anatoliy Savenko from Kyiv. She will try to elaborate what kind of politician Savenko was and what influenced his political self-representation. Olena Betlii will focus on refugees from Western parts of the Russian Empire who settled in Kyiv in 1915-1916. She will reconstruct how a refugee perceived her/himself and what being a refugee meant for a person. Oksana Dudko will elaborate how Ukrainian artistic milieu reacted to new political reality created by the end of WWI. She will show the ways Lviv artists started to (re)identify themselves beyond the Habsburg Monarchy.
